

5 Tips to Effectively Pack Your Moving Boxes

Getting the right moving boxes is just the start. Once you have the right boxes for your residential move, you have to effectively pack your moving boxes. The right packing strategy will go a long way in protecting your items.

If you're planning to move, you need to know how to pack your boxes. Here are five of the best tips to ensure you pack your moving boxes properly.

Pack Room-By-Room

An effective method of packing your moving boxes is to do it room-by-room. With this packing method, it's easy to get unpacked when you arrive at your new home.

Start with the bedrooms and move through the house one room at a time. Make sure everything is fully labeled and use a different color marker for each room. Label the boxes with the room and the contents of the box to make sure they end up in the right place when you arrive at your new home.

If you use the room-by-room packing method, you'll be glad you did when you arrive at your new home. It's a great way to ensure your moving boxes are properly packed for a successful move.

Don't Use Large Boxes for Heavy Items

Larger moving boxes can be tempting to use for all kinds of items. However, when you put heavy items in these boxes, you make an awkward box to carry even more awkward. The last thing you need is an injury when moving. Pack lighter things, such as pillows and baskets into larger moving boxes and try to put heavier things in smaller boxes.

It's best to consider grouping items by size and weight as you go through each room, too. The other danger of packing larger moving boxes with heavier items is the integrity of the box. If the box breaks, you could be in for all kinds of issues. Imagine a kitchen box filled with dishes breaking under the weight. It could be a huge mess. You won't have to worry about this with reusable moving boxes.

A good rule of thumb for the weight of your boxes is to keep them under 30 pounds each.

Pack Lighter Items on the Top

Putting heavier items on the bottom of the box is a good start. Then, you want to pack your lighter items on the top of those heavier items. This type of packing will allow your lighter items to survive the move without being crushed.

Wrap Everything That's Fragile

If it could break, wrap it. Use bubble wrap or packing paper to ensure anything fragile is protected from damage. You can even cushion the most fragile items with towels and other soft items you need to pack for the move.

Pack Heavy Items in Very Small Boxes

A good example of the best way to pack heavy items is packing books. If you put them all in one big box, it will get super heavy. However, if you use smaller boxes and you pack 5 to 15 books per box, you won't have to worry as much. With any heavy items, use smaller boxes to ensure the boxes don't get too heavy to carry.

Packing your moving boxes is important. Use these packing tips to ensure you make moving easier.

Plan Your Relocation with this Office Moving Checklist

A commercial move is a huge deal. When you're relocating your office from one place to another, you need to make sure you're organized. Whether your lease ran out or you're moving into a larger space, you need the right office moving checklist.

With the right moving checklist, you'll know everything has been properly packed and moved to the new location. If you need to relocate your office, here's an office moving checklist you can use to help get the job done.

Three to Six Months Before Moving

While this category says three to six months before moving, it should be things you do as soon as you're sure you'll be moving. These items include:

- Figure out the Time Frame and Schedule for your office move - Include the dates when you will be moving all the equipment, when the staff will begin working at the new location, etc.
- Find and Secure a New Location - If you don't already have a new location for your office, this is the time to find and secure your new location.
- Assign Responsibilities and Tasks - It's time to let your employees know you'll be moving and assign the necessary tasks and responsibilities to be done.
- Create an Inventory List - You should also create a list of your existing equipment and furniture. This will help you to see what you need and don't need. Consider selling anything you no longer need before moving.
- Create a Budget - You will also want to consider a budget for your move. Consider the cost of a moving company and everything else involved.

Two Months Before Moving Day

When relocation day starts to get a bit closer, you want to make sure you take care of the following:

- Change your business address with the USPS, IRS, Bank, and other important vendors
- Review your current lease to ensure you know what you need to do with your current space
- Hire the right office moving company and find out if anything you will be moving requires special attention.
- Start holding regular moving meetings to keep everybody on task.

One Month Before Moving

The day is nearly here and it's time to take care of the following:

- Transfer your utilities
- Make the moving announcement in a Press Release or public relations campaign
- Implement a labeling system
- Inventory and tag all equipment, furniture, office supplies, etc.
- Procure the necessary moving supplies
- Order new business cards and stationery
- Determine your security procedures for the move
- Get parking and moving permits
- Hiring professional cleaners for the old space

Two Weeks Before Moving

About two weeks before moving your office, you want to:

- Check the new location and make sure it's ready
- Clean as much as you can in the old space
- Back up any vital information on your computer system
- Call your moving company to confirm the date and time

The Week of the Move

The week is finally here and it's time to:

- Hand out new keys and employee cards for the new space
- Disconnect all electronics and major appliances
- Set aside anything not going with the movers
- Inspect your new office thoroughly to ensure it's ready to go

On Moving Day

It's time to relocate to your new space, but first, make sure you take care of the following:

- Designate your moving coordinators on-site to ensure everything runs smoothly
- Assign someone to do the final walkthrough at the old space
- Meet with the movers and provide instructions for the day

Use this office moving checklist as a guide and customize it as you see fit. With the right commercial moving company helping you and this checklist, your office move should go very smoothly.

How to Know if You Need Help from Professional Packers

Not everybody needs professional packers, even if they plan to hire residential movers to help with the moving of their home or apartment. However, some homes and apartments are in desperate need of professional packers. How do you know if you need to hire packers for your move?

There are several factors to consider and it starts with what your goals are for the move. Let's look at some of the reasons why you should consider hiring professional packers for your upcoming move.

Flexibility

One of the biggest advantages of hiring packers to help with your move is the flexibility you gain. When you hire a packing service, you can take advantage of the full service or you can pick and choose what you would like them to pack for you.

For example, you could have the professionals take care of furniture, a heavy piano, heavy appliances, and other big items.

Safety

Another huge reason to hire packers for your move is the safety aspect. Moving everything and packing it up on your own can be dangerous if you don't know what you're doing. Special packing techniques can be used to ensure your items don't break and nobody gets hurt.

Professional packers handle items every day. They know how to do so safely and keep your stuff from getting broken or becoming too heavy. When you hire professional packers, you won't have to worry about safety as much.

Professional Packing Supplies

While safety is super important, gaining access to professional packing supplies makes a difference, too. When professionals packer your things, they will bring high-quality packing materials for your items. If you have antiques, paintings, furniture, and other valuable items, this can be a huge benefit of hiring professional packers.

The packers will bring bubble wrap, packing paper, tape, markers, moving boxes and everything that needs to be used to pack your item. They will also have special boxes for things, such as TVs and other odd items to help ensure your things are well protected.

Better Efficiency

Professional packers will also be far more efficient with the packing than you will be. They are so efficient because they know what they are doing and have been doing it for many years. While they will be packing faster, they won't compromise safety at all.

If you have a large home, the efficiency can help quite a bit. You can really narrow down the packing time by hiring professionals to do the packing for you.

The decision to hire professionals to handle the packing is a big decision. If you have a larger home to pack up, it can be a huge time saver. Professionals are also very safe and you have the flexibility to choose what they will and won't pack for you.

For those with large items, fragile items or just a large amount of items, hiring professionals to handle the packing is a great way to go. Pair this with professional residential movers and you'll make your entire move is much easier.
